ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

By preparing fully-embedded interconnect structure samples for a cross-section analysis by means of electron microscopy or x-ray microscopy, degradation mechanisms may be efficiently monitored. Moreover, displaying some of the measurement results as a quick motion representation enables the detection of subtle changes of characteristics of an interconnect structure in a highly efficient manner.